Based on values to find the best applicants and to develop employees purposefully

What is profilingvalues?

Meta studies have shown that scientifically validated procedures provide additional value in recruiting processes and personnel development. Many of them, however only measure behaviour and attitudes, are manipulatable and cost a lot of time. Furthermore, they only map a static profile of the person.

The potential analysis profilingvalues uses a value metric method, which goes beyond behavioural tendencies. Unlike behaviour, values are deeply entrenched in a person. They also influence behaviour therefore a good understanding of a person's values enables a better prognosis of their future behaviour.

* profilingvalues is based on the value psychological scientific approach of Professor Robert S. Hartman, who focuses on evaluating by giving meaning. He is the main representative of value science and the founder of formal axiology (mathematically exact value science). Robert Hartman died in 1973, in the year he was nominated for the Nobel peace prize.

This is profilingvalues

- An innovative potential analysis, which maps the personal value system of a person.
- Ultimately, it points out one's fundamental personality traits and competences their degree of ability and their motivation to use these abilities.
- The test method is extremely efficient and can be carried out in about 20-30 minutes.
- Profilingvalues is scientifically substantiated and cannot be manipulated.
- A feedback conversation and discussion of results take place via videocall or phone.
